Report of scallop divers falsely claiming to be marine biologists from Bangor University

It has come to our attention that there have been reports of a team of scallop divers falsely claiming to be marine biologists working on behalf of Bangor University in the mid and south Wales coastal areas.

Bangor University's School of Ocean Sciences, has a number of projects around Wales in which we are working with local businesses and fishermen. The two main projects are: European Fishery Fund project 'Sustainable fisheries in Welsh waters':

and SEACAMS: www.seacams.ac.uk/staff/

Images of the staff, researchers, and students involved in these projects can be found at these website links (above). If you are in doubt then feel free to contact the individuals listed on the above websites to check somebody's identity. In addition, all Bangor staff and students will carry with them a photo identity card like the one shown below.
